

Historic, Archive Document

Do not assume content reflects current scientific knowledge, policies, or practices.

BROWNELL ROSE RESEARCH GARDENS
LITTLE COMPTON, RHODE ISLAND

February 25, 1952

Library, U. S. Department
of Agriculture
Washington 25, D. C.

Gentlemen:

What kind of a winter have you had?

The winter here has been really mild.

I have ten of your Roses growing in my garden. One has been growing five years and has stood our temperatures as low as fifty three below zero, and all the rest have withstood forty five degrees below zero without damage.

That report came to us from North Dakota.

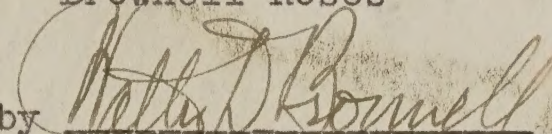

We get letters as pleasing, by the hundreds, many from the South.

Have you any customers who would like to grow rose blooms as large and beautiful as any, that can grow on such bushes, larger each year?

If you have, send in your list at once while most of the varieties are still available.

Sincerely,

Brownell Roses

by Walter D. Brownell

LIBRARY
U.S. DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE
MAR 14 1952

Library, U. S. Department
of Agriculture
Washington 25, D. C.

Gentlemen:

What kind of a winter have you had?

The winter here has been really wild.

I have ten of your roses growing in my garden. One was born about five years and has stood a temperature as low as fifty three below zero, and the rest have withstood forty five below zero without damage.

What report came to us from North Dakota.

We got letters as pleasing, by the hundreds, many from the South.

Have you any customers who would like to grow roses as late and beautiful as ours. They grow on such thorns, larger and better.

If you have, let us know list of names while most of the roses are still available.

U. S. Department of Agriculture
MAR 3 - 1952
LIBRARY
RECEIVED
Walter D. Brownell